

ADDITIONAL SCHOLARSHIP SOURCES

A wide variety of arts groups, civic groups, and other organization offer scholarships to students interested specifically in study abroad. University professors from the art department at the student's current or former home school may be able to suggest possible scholarship sources. Scholarship guides are available in the local library or bookstore; however, by far the most popular way to search for scholarships is through the internet. Several sites offer scholarship information to students with no fee. Beware of any sites charging a fee for scholarship searches since some of these sites are not reputable.
